BUILDING OF EXCELLENCE AWARD FOR 1986

The Iron Workers Employers Association of Washington, D.C. (IWEA) has chosen the Agency's New Headquarters Building as its "Building of Excellence" for 1986. The IWEA is a trade association made up of iron and steel manufacturers and fabricators, and, as you would expect, recognizes new buildings that utilize a lot of the product that they make and sell. The awards ceremony will be held at the Congressional Country Club in Potomac, Maryland on 25 April 1986. The announced schedule of activities for that evening is as follows:

5:30 - 7:00 p.m. a social hour and a half on the veranda
 7:00 - 8:00 p.m. dinner in the Windsor Room
 8:00 - 8:30 p.m. awards ceremony

The IWEA will present awards for this project to the following organizations in the following order:

Organization	Award	Recipient
CIA	Owner's Award	Mr. William F. Donnelley Deputy Director for Administration
GSA	Construction Management Award	Mr. William F. Madison, Regional Administrator, National Capital Region
SH&G	Architect's Award	Mr. James R. Livingston, Executive Vice President
Centex	Builder's Award	Mr. Robert Hay, President

Attached is the award notification letter received from the IWEA of Washington, DC. As the second page of the letter suggests, the Agency is travelling in some pretty good company.

The Agency and, in particular, the Office of Logistics, is proud to be a participant in this event. The Agency will be represented at the ceremony by the Deputy Director for Administration, DA, the Director of Logistics, and the present and past chiefs of the New Building Project Office. We are particularly proud of the role individuals from the Office of Logistics played through this project from the planning stage to the present construction phase. It is indeed fortunate that the IRON Workers Employers Association took note of our accomplishment and deemed us worthy of this award. (Using 7000 tons of steel probably didn't hurt either!)

Dear [Redacted]

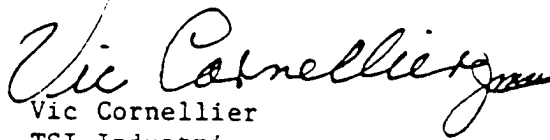

The Iron Workers Employers Association of Washington, D.C., an Association of structural steel and architectural metal fabricating and erection firms, annually selects an outstanding new addition to the Metropolitan Washington Building Community which exemplifies the very highest standards of achievement in design and building craftsmanship to be recognized as the "Building of Excellence". Our Committee has selected the C.I.A. New Building Project to be the recipient of the Award "Building of Excellence" for 1986. The awards will be presented at the Annual "Awards of Excellence" Dinner at the Congressional Country Club in Potomac, Maryland on Friday, April 25, 1986.

We are also pleased to advise you that G.S.A. will receive an owners award for the "Building of Excellence" as well as C.I.A. receiving an identical award. The Award for "Excellence in Architecture" and "Excellence in Engineering" will be to Smith, Hinchman and Grylls. The Award for the "Builder of Excellence" will be to Centex Construction Company, Inc. for creating such a superb building as envisioned both in form and function by the design team.

It is our feeling that the key to this successful building project was the selection of the gifted architectural/engineering design team who were provided with a budget which allowed them to perform at the very highest level of competency in achieving function and design compatible with the owners image and stature. May I again offer my congratulations to C.I.A. and G.S.A. and we look forward to a very pleasant evening with you, your staff, the other award recipients and our other distinguished guests. A formal invitation will be forwarded in the near future. I am respectfully requesting that you please notify G.S.A., the architect and engineer and Centex of their selection and please forward a list of principals from each of the organizational offices who should be invited to the Awards Dinner.

Thank you very much for your cooperation.

Very truly yours,

Vic Cornellier
